Message from the President, Amb. Dore Gold

The year 2017 saw a major expansion of Jerusalem Center activities globally and within Israel.

A “think tank” has several vital functions. It is an incubator for ideas, a forum for opinions, and a resource for reporters, analysts, and government planners. In 1977, just as the Carter administration took office, the Brookings Institution in Washington published a report that served as the administration’s policy playbook. The era of “think tanks” was formally born. Today, Israel has followed the American model with think tanks taking part in the policy debate.

At the Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs, which I have headed since I left the UN in 1999, we are well aware of this diplomatic and academic responsibility. But located in beleaguered Israel, the Jerusalem Center also serves as a defense vehicle in the war of ideas. We research the words and actions of Iran and its proxies, follow trends in the Arab world, focus on the actions and factions of the Palestinian leadership, and expose the mendacity of the BDS movement. We also see the Jerusalem Center as an important conduit to reach the international media who are fed a steady diet of fake news and canards by Israel’s detractors.

The Jerusalem Center has been on the front lines of Israel’s own internal discourse on issues of diplomacy and national security.

Over the last year, our outreach and output have increased dramatically. Our studies on Palestinian funding of terror became a major pillar for legislative actions in Congress. We defended the Balfour Declaration in London and Jerusalem against critics who seek Israel’s delegitimization.

The Jerusalem Center has been on the front lines of Israel’s own internal discourse on issues of diplomacy and national security.

Our expert analysts have delved into some of the most important topics in the Middle East and shared their information with counterparts in Europe, the United States, Asia, and even the Arab World. Accordingly, the Jerusalem Center greatly expanded its information conveyance throughout social media – in videos, podcasts, Facebook, Twitter, and the conventional Web-based articles, blogs, and analyses.

Support for Relocating the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem

Dore Gold's Testimony to Congress on Moving the U.S. Embassy to Jerusalem, November 8, 2017

Jerusalem Center President Dore Gold testified before the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on November 8, 2017, discussing "Moving the American Embassy to Jerusalem: Challenges and Opportunities." Excerpts follow:

It is my view that President Donald Trump has made a commitment in that regard and I believe he will stand by what he has said. The United States will evaluate the timing and circumstances for executing that decision in accordance with its interests.

The embassy question is a subset of a much more important issue: the need for Western recognition of Jerusalem as Israel's capital. That recognition is vital for several reasons. On a political level, the denial of recognition helps fuel the dangerous fantasy, popular in the Middle East, that Israel is impermanent and illegitimate. On a religious and cultural level, the denial of recognition helps fuel the dangerous fantasy that Jews have no connection to Jerusalem and Israel – that their presence is an imposition because the land is not their homeland.

"You move the embassy, you create a box of realism for our neighbors. Israel is not going to give up Jerusalem. Somebody better digest that."

Protecting Jerusalem's holy sites is a responsibility that the State of Israel assumed in law back in 1967, when Jerusalem was re-united after the Six Day War. Only a free and democratic Israel will protect the holy sites of all the great faiths in Jerusalem. Let me stress, to the extent that the U.S. reinforces Israel's standing in Jerusalem, it is reinforcing core American and Western values of pluralism, peace, and mutual respect – and it is reinforcing the position of the only international actor that will protect Jerusalem's holy sites.

Jerusalem: Asserting Israel's Case for its Ancient Jewish Birthright

On the occasion of the 50th anniversary of Jerusalem's unification – and in response to UN resolutions that sought to deny the Jewish connection to Jerusalem – Amb. Gold created an original presentation of 3,000 years of Jewish history in Jerusalem, with the assistance of Israel's finest, state-of-the-art, multi-media technology. This exciting sensory experience brings sacred sites and ancient documents to life while telling the story of the Jewish people's unbreakable connection to Israel and Jerusalem through the ages.

In the presentation, Gold offered compelling visuals of archaeological treasures, rare documents, vintage photos and clandestine film footage that bring the historical record to life, offering irrefutable evidence of the Jewish people's persistent ties to Jerusalem.

Amb. Gold has presented the multi-media display to the Board of Trustees of the Jewish Federations of North America in New York and the Museum of Tolerance in Los Angeles, as well as the Royal United Services Institute for Defense and Security Studies in London, the UK's oldest think tank.

Exposing the Palestinian Authority's Payment of Salaries to Terrorists and Their Families

The Palestinian Authority's legislation and allocations of monthly salaries and benefits to imprisoned and released terrorists and to the families of "Martyrs" amount to $300 million annually. This financial reward demonstrates the PA's institutional commitment to sponsoring terror against Israel.

The salary payments to terrorists from all Palestinian terror organizations, including Hamas and those who carried out terror attacks after the Oslo agreements came into effect, are made according to Palestinian Authority legislation that refers to the terrorists specifically as "fighters."

The Jerusalem Center's ground-breaking expose on the PA grants to terrorists was covered around the globe.

The U.S. Congress is moving to pass the "Taylor Force Act," legislation named after the West Point graduate who was murdered by a Palestinian terrorist in Tel Aviv on March 8, 2016, which would cut U.S. assistance to the Palestinian Authority until it stops payment to terrorists. Jerusalem Center research provided critical data to the legislation's drafters.

Defending the Balfour Declaration in the British House of Commons

Proving the Balfour Declaration's Historical Significance in the Face of Detractors Seeking to Delegitimize Israel

The stated purpose of the Balfour Declaration, published on November 2, 1917, and the circumstances under which it was published are generally known. The most common explanation was that Britain and the Allied Powers were moved by idealism and their interests. At a critical point in the First World War, the British cabinet needed to secure world Jewish support for the Allied cause and hoped at the same time to keep both the United States and Russia on their side. With time, however, the world's understanding of the Declaration has become the subject of bitter controversy and revisionist interpretation. In fact, the Palestinian Authority of today went so far as to call it a "crime."

The Balfour Declaration is important because it recognizes the historical bond of the Jewish People to the Holy Land, a bond which existed long before the Declaration. It contains the world's recognition of the historical rights of the Jewish People to a National Home. What was significant was its public and formal recognition and its subsequent incorporation into international law.

In Jerusalem

The Jerusalem Center also hosted a one-day Balfour Conference in Jerusalem and devoted its most recent volume of the Jewish Political Studies Review to the Balfour Declaration.

Lessons from Israel's Response to Terrorism: A Message for Europe

Effective solidarity among states has become a prerequisite for ultimately succeeding in the war of the West against jihadist terrorism. Yet, in the aftermath of the Islamic State's brutal attacks in Paris during 2015 that left 129 dead, a discussion began in the international media of whether the terrorist attacks against Israelis could be compared with the newest jihadist assault on European capitals.

Recent events have challenged the European definition of terrorism. A cohesive military strategy is needed for the West, the Arab states that are threatened, and Israel. It stands to reason that, just as all three face similar threats, the models developed in Israel for dealing with terror merit attention in Europe and beyond.

In its studies and meetings with European parliaments and diplomats, the Jerusalem Center has encouraged joint planning and intelligence sharing.

Fiamma Nirenstein, Jerusalem Center Fellow and editor of our recent study on terrorism, presented her book in the Italian Parliament in Rome, March 15, 2017.

Exposing the Methods and Strategies behind the BDS Campaign against Israel

BDS is commonly misunderstood in the West. Many believe it is a progressive, nonviolent boycott movement to establish a Palestinian state in the disputed West Bank. This is a deception. The BDS leadership's publicly stated goal is to delegitimize and isolate Israel internationally with the strategic objective of causing its implosion.

There is a sharp point of intersection between anti-Semitism, BDS, and the delegitimization phenomena. Whereas historically anti-Semitism was based on religious and later racial arguments against individual Jews that are now proscribed, today's anti-Semitism is based on national arguments against the existence of the Jewish state.

BDS activists accuse Israel of practicing apartheid, a charge fiercely rejected by South Africans who are helping Israel in the war against BDS in South Africa. The Jerusalem Center works closely with these activists. Dan Diker leads this research project.

Iran's Nuclear Program, Ballistic Missiles, and Military Expansion in the Middle East

Beyond Iran's threatening nuclear program, its behavior in the Middle East has become far more dangerous. Iran's Islamic Revolution Guards Corps (IRGC) and its auxiliary "local" forces, Hezbollah and the Houthis, for instance, are dominating Iraq, Syria, Yemen, and Lebanon and expanding Iranian hegemony with no clear end point.

Jerusalem Center papers by Brig.-Gen. (ret.) Dr. Shimon Shapira have exposed the scale of Iran's Shiite networks. In 2014–15, his research first disclosed "Hezbollah Syria," and the goal of Iran to deploy the IRGC near the Golan Heights.

Iran is testing new generations of missiles, despite the fact that the UN Security Council prohibited this type of activity. The Iranian navy is regularly moving throughout the Middle East region, from the Persian Gulf to the Red Sea, and has even visited the Mediterranean. Lt. Col. (ret.) Michael Segall monitors Iran's growing naval role.

Iran's long-range ballistic missiles have ranges that could hit anywhere in the Middle East and Israel, even parts of Europe.

The Palestinians and the Peace Process

The Jerusalem Center's team of diplomatic, security, and research experts has decades of experience reporting and analyzing the peace process and its players. Arabic- and Persian-speaking experts maintain close touch with the Arab/Muslim world, following developments in Tehran, Baghdad, Riyadh, Ramallah, Beirut, Amman, Cairo, Damascus, and Gaza. Their analyses appear in English and Hebrew on the Jerusalem Center's websites, and reactions from the Arab world mean that the material is read on the other side of Israel's borders. The team members are interviewed by Arab media frequently.

The Jerusalem Center team on the Palestinian issue includes Lt. Col. (ret.) Jonathan D. Halevi, Yoni Ben Menachem, and Pinhas Inbari.
